Carter Cancels Plan To Fly to Germany

By Helen Thomas United Press Inter

WASHINGTON - President Carter canceled plans Monday to go to West Germany to greet the 52 U.S. hostages as president but accepted Ronald Reagan's offer to go later as his representative. White House officials said Monday that the time passed for Mr.

Carter to leave Washington, get to West Germany to great the hostages and return in time for Mr. Reagan's inauguration Tuesday.

They said Mr. Reagan made the offer to Carter in the morning, and in the alternoon Mr. Carter called Mr. Reagan back to accept. The officials said there were still some discussions on the agreement reached to free the hostages, but they were not substantial prob-lems. However, they said as long as there were some differences re-maining, the differences could de-lay their release.

Mr. Carter Monday announced the agreement with Iran for the hostages' freedom, but a State Department spokesman mised the possibility that the Americans' long captivity would not end until Tuesday.

Earlier, Tehran radio said not even America's "final surrender" would give "clowning" President Carter time to welcome the 52 U.S. hostages to freedom.

TEHRAN --- Last-minute hitches prevented the 52 American hostages from being flown to freedom Monday night after Algerian doctors examined them and told them they were about to leave for home.

Diplomatic sources initially said that the delay was caused because Iran forgot to sign a document that would open an escrow account in the Bank of England. The bank is acting as a ceutral depository for funds to be transferred to Iran from the United States in return for the hostages' edom. The sources said that the hitch was not serious but could take time unless oormal banking practices were circumvented.

In London. Foreign Office sources said Britain would end its trade sanctions following release of the hostages.

Shift of Assets: Easy Electronic Maneuver

Series of Bookkeeping Operations Requiring No Physical Transfer

WASHINGTON - The actual transfer of several billion dollars of Iranian assets out of the United States, one of the largest single financial transactions in recent history and the result of complicated negotiations, will, in all result of complicated negotiations, will, in all likelihood, be a simple process. The assets, including some $930 million worth of gold bars held by the Federal Reserva, will probably be electronically shifted in a se-ries of bookkeeping maneuvers that require no physical transfer.

European Branches

The exact sequence of the assets transfer and the release of the hostages is not yet clear. But most of the money will come from several American banks that have already taken steps to free the necessary funds by borrowing, on a short-term basis, from various sources. Last week, the Federal Reserve took steps to facilitate the transfer of the gold.

Five banks, Chase Manhattan Bank, Bank of . America, Bankers Trust, Manufacturers Hano-ver Trust and Citibank, held Iran's foreign currency reserves, some $3.5 billion, in their overseas branches at the time of the freeze in November, 1979. While this amount constituted the bulk of Iran's foreign reserves, it is only 1 percent of the total assets of the five banks.

American banks held some $6 billion in Iranian deposits at the time of the freeze. Most of those deposits, more than $4 billion, were m European branches of the American banks. After the freeze, the banks offset some of those European deposits against Iranian debts that became delinquent longer carried as "credits" on the books of the American banks and the banks have had to go elsewhere to raise the necessary funds to return the Iranian money.

As a result, the Iranian deposits were on

Last week, money traders ooted that several of the banks holding large Iranian deposits were active in selling 30-day certificates of deposit, a common source of bank borrowing.

Bank officials in Chicago, New York and San Francisco have been standing by the last few days, awaiting instructions from U.S. gov-emment officials. The banks are expected to electronically shift their funds to the Federal Reserve, which serves as the official international bank for the United States.

The American banks maintain accounts with the Federal Reserve, and in all likelihood the Federal Reserve will simply debit the individual bank's account and then credit the same amount to whatever depository the Iranian's have chosen.

Established Hookup

Unless the Iranians want each American bank to transfer its funds separately, the Federal Reserve, through cable or telex, could complete the transaction in one step, using a long-established international banking wire hookup. In addition to holding Iran's gold, some 1.632 million ounces worth about $930 million, the Federal Reserve holds some $1.3 billion in Iranian securities.

Friday, the Treasury Department's assay office - the Federal Reserve does not store U.S. gold - set aside 1.632 million ounces of gold for England. At the same time, in London, the Bank of England took 1.632 million ounces of its own gold and labeled it American gold.

Iran from powerful transmitters near the border, repeatedly de-scribed the diplomats as agents, demanded that they be held until the late shah, Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, was compelled to return to stand trial for his misdeeds, and dinned the message that the Unit-ed States was using the hostages as a pretext to prepare an invasion.

These tactics, used again last week by Pravda and denounced as "scurrilons" by U.S. Secretary of State Edmund Musice, underscore the great stake Moscow had in prolonging the crisis. Next came a series of low-key criticisms of Mr. Reagan's associ-ates in the field of foreign affairs, starting with former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. Pravda said that Mr. Kissinger's trip to the Middle East demonstrated the new administration's "hegemonistic plans" in that region. Caspar Weinberger, the incom-ing secretary of defense, was criti-cized by Tass for his advocacy of a U.S. arms buildup. Tass asserted that comments by Richard Allen, the next national security adviser, suggested that Mr. Reagan intend-ed to "pensist in pursuing" what it called the discredited Camp David agreements on the Middle East.

In recent days Mr. Reagan's advisers have been criticized much more sharply. Last Tuesday Prav-da offered its harshest comment to

Reagan Plans 'Inspirational' First Speech

By Lou Cannon

Washington Pass Service WASHINGTON --- More than anything, President-elect Reagan's political career has been based on his reputation as an evocative and inspirational speaker. He will try to do what he does best in his inqugural message on Tuesday, deliver-ing a speech described by those who have seen it as tone-setting, rather than one that attempts to outline the programs of the Reagan administration. "It is a speech in which the pres-Reagan wants to be a message that Because of the nature of the ocwill casion, the speech will, of course, "make headlines," But the hope of the incoming president and his close aides is that the message will ratify the Reagan campaign themes of revitalizing the nation's economy and restoring the United States' role in the world.

Top Reagan adviser Edwin Meese 3d said that the speech "includes the hope that there is a way out of our economic problems with a solution involving all of the people of the country, not just the people of this government."

Thematic Speech

Mr. Meese said that the speech was thematic and attempted to give a sense of direction but did not contain a list of the president's proposals. Mr. Reagan is expected to give details of his initial actions in a series of messages to Congress during the first few weeks of his administration.

As inaugural speeches go, this one has been in preparation for a long time. Kenneth Khachigian, a mer Nixon speech writer from California who became Mr. Reagan's principal campaign speech writer, started collecting memorandums for the inangural address in mid-December. He received about 10 memorandums from senior staff members. Mr. Reagan then responded to these proposals, telling Mr. Khachigian which ideas be liked and which he did not, Mr. Khachigian then reworked the material. "I served as the mechanic who did away with the dross and left the gold," he

It is an article of faith among political speech writers that it is the politician and not the speech writer who writes the address. But Mr. Reagan is a practiced speaker, and it is literally true that he likes to write his own material for ceremonial occasions. Mr. Reagan, in fact, can be fussy about the language of a speech. During the campaign, to the consternation of his staff, newspaper deadlines were sometimes missed while the candi-date reworked a speech.

The president-elect wrote most of his inaugural address in longhand. He did most of the writing on a flight returning to California from Washington on Jan. 8. He did the last page — "the magic page," Mr. Reagan called it — at his Pacific Palisades, Calif., home

The assumption in Defense De-partment circles is that if the Unit-ed States opted for a strategic nn-clear force based in part on unverifiable missiles, there would be no chance for another round of strategic arms negotiations. Instead, they predicted, the Rus-sians would expand their mobile missile systems.

SS-16 One of these, now domnant, is the SS-16, developed in the mid-1970s for deployment either as a mobile weapon or in silos. The SS-20, the Soviet Union's primary intermediate ballistic missile, now deployed in the western regions of the Soviet Union, is a two-stage version of the SS-16. During negotiations for the second strategic arms treaty, signed but not rati-

MX promises high survivability in nuclear war. This would be achieved by the continuous shifting of the 200 advanced missiles from one to another of 4,600 shelters. Advocates argue that even in "the worst case" half the missiles would survive an attack and that this survival rate would deter the Soviet Union from launching a first strike.

An alternative system has the blessing of Melvin Laird, who was secretary of defense under President Nixon. Mr. Laird advocates spreading intercontinental missile force across the oceans in vessels ranging from major combat ships to fast merchant vessels.

A variant of this idea is the launching of missiles from seagoing launches. This is the outcome of the Hydra Project, carried out by the Navy nearly 20 years ago. The Hydra project calls for the waterproofing of bare, unencapsu-

China to Downgrade Ties To Dutch Over Taiwan Sale

United Press Intern PEKING - China said Monday that it will downgrade its diplo-matic relations with the Netherlands from the ambassadorial level to that of charge d'affaires in retaliation for a Dutch decision to sell two submarines to Taiwan.

China's decision, conveyed to Ambassador Jan Kneppelhout by the deputy foreign minister, Zhang Canming, followed streauous efforts by Peking to force the Hague to change its decision to sell the submarines to Taiwan.

North Koreans Reject Chun's Visit Proposal

United Press International TOKYO — North Korea Mon-day rejected as a "foolish bur-lesque" South Korean President Chun Doo Hwan's proposal for an exchange of visits with North Korean President Kim II Sung.

Vice President Kim II, speaking as chairman of the North Korean Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland, accused Gen. Chun of making the proposal to help his presidential campaign.

"This is nothing but a foolish burlesque designed to whitewash his dirty natioo-splitting nature and gain public favor with the 'presidential election' at hand," Mr. Kim said in a statement carried by the official (North) Korean Central News Agency and monitored in Tokyo.

"As we have already announced elearly, Chun Doo Hwan is not a man worthy for us to do anything with," he said. He called the proposal, made a week ago, "a foolish act of a rogue who does not know where his place is." Gen. Chun last week called on the North Korean president to join him in exchanging visits, without conditions attached, to ease tensions between the two nations.

China said the Dutch decision had undermined relations between the two countries, threatened peace in the area and the eventual reunficiation of the island with the mainland and added that the Netherlands must bear the full consequences for its action.

The Chinese deputy foreign minister proposed to the ambassa-dor that "the two sides conduct negotiations on the downgrading of diplomatic relations between the two countries" — a formality since China had already decided on it. The Dutch ambassador was expected to return home shortly.

Affront Seen

The Chinese news agency Sunday also accused the United States of inspiring the submarine sale, saying the Dutch went ahead with the multimillion dollar deal after backstage U.S. support for the transaction." The controversy crupted in November when the Dutch govern-ment gave the go-ahead for the sale of two submarines to Taiwan although it had no diplomatic relations with the island.

China protested vigorously and alled it an affront to China but the Dutch government late last week reaffirmed the decision. Earlier Monday China accused Dutch Premier Andreas Van Agt of deliberately lying when he claimed he had held informal discassions with China on the proposed sale. China said no such disrussions had taken place. Peking declared that Taiwan was "an inalienable part of China's sacred territory" and that the Dutch government had recognized this when relations were upgraded to ambassadorial level in 1972.

BERLIN - Hans-Jochen Vogel, West Germany's justice minister, was nominated Monday to run for election for mayor of West Berlin following the resignation of the city leadership last week. A spokesman for the ruling So-cial Democratic Party said that Mr. Vogel, 54, had been nomi-nated by the party leadership in Bonn and would run for election in the city House of Representatives on Thursday after being approved by a meeting of the local party. The House elects the mayor. The government of former Mayor Dietrich Stobbe collapsed last Thursday after a financial scandal that left the authorities with a bill for 115 million Deutsche marks in the form of credit guarantees for a failed building company. The West Berlin post is the most important political job outside Bonn. The nomination of Mr. Vo-gel followed intense negotiations among Social Democratic leaders in Bonn, including Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, to find a successor for Mr. Stobbe. Mr. Vogel is conidered a likely successor to Mr. Schmidt

The financial scandal took a new twist Sunday. A police spokes-man said that a telephone conver-sation in which Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Peter Glotz, a West Berlin city senator, had been tapped. Coming Home

For the 52 American hostages, soon to be free and on their way home to their families, an ordeal that is largely incomprehensible to most of us will have ended. For their wives and children, their mothers and fathers, these will be days of joyful anticipation and then unsurpassed elation. For the hostages, themselves, the emotions triggered by their release after 141/2 months of captivity will range across the spectrum of human feeling, as will those emotions that remain bottled up, incapable of expression.

The solidarity, the genuine feeling of community that the American people shared with the hostages and their kin, must continue, because in the weeks and months to come these men women and children will have to contend with and repair unknown quantities of psychic damage. They will need all the help they can get, and deserve, both on humanitarian grounds and because they have served their country with dignity and honor under far more difficult circumstances than any of them were likely to have envisioned when they accepted their assignments in Tehran.

But the main thing, now, is that they are near freedom. For that, the American people should join with the hostages and their families in gratitude to all those who worked tirelessly, in some cases throughout the long days of captivity, to win the release. Foremost among those deserving credit and thanks is President Carter, who now ends his humane and well-intentioned presidency with a triumph on which compassion had to be balanced against a broader concept of national interest. Mr. Carter may have gone further than some would have liked in agreeing to return frozen Iranian assets, but most dispassionate observers would probably agree that he did not compromise U.S. honor in pursuit of liberty for the hostages.

Thanks also go to Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who conducted the tedious and difficult negotiations in Algiers; to assistant secretary of state Harold Saunders and everyone else at the State Department and other U.S. government agencies who worked long and hard under the most frustrating conditions to bring their colleagues home; to the Algerian intermediaries and American and British bankers who helped bring it off; and to Vice President Mondale, all those in the White House who worked on the situation, and all those who helped but received no public attention. Thanks, too, to President-elect Reagan for his discretion.

After the thanks are done, though, serious questions remain. What lessons are to be drawn from the long crisis? There are the obvious things, of course, like protecting embassies or withdrawing the personnel if protection cannot be assured. But no matter what precautions are taken, this could happen again. Will every U.S. Embassy around the world be prepared for a similar contingency? At a deeper level, will U.S. intelligence analysts be better able next time to recognize and warn against the dangers in a revolutionary situation?

Perhaps the most difficult question of all, though, is how the United States should deal with Iran once the hostages are free. There is surely substantial sentiment in the United States for sharp recrimination. Many Americans are angry. They feel their country was humiliated by a third-rate power. What they want, in a word, is revenge.

There are also those - a smaller number - who counsel forgiveness. And there are pragmatists who argue that no matter who is running Iran now, it is a strategically placed country capable of pumping more than 6 million barrels of oil a day and that it must not be allowed to fall under Soviet domination.

The words of President Carter and the hostages and their families will influence that debate. But no one will influence it more than Mr. Reagan. He must help the United States expiate its feelings in a constructive way; he must demonstrate that there is a price to pay for an act of aggression against U.S. citizens and for flouting international law and practice; and he must not lose sight of the U.S. strategic interest in Iran, a country still lacking a stable center of power. It is a delicate balancing act. And it is as important, in its way, as the last 141/2 months.

Mrs. Mao's Defense

A one-time Shanghai film actress, Mrs. Mao Tse-tung has put on quite a show in the Peking courtroom where she is being tried for treason and the like. She has sassed the court, stuck to her old political guns, attacked those who put her in the dock and dared the government to hand down the death sentence that would seem to be indicated by Chinese law. The court - or, to be more precise, the government - has been sitting on the case for more than two weeks, seemingly unable to decide whether to execute and make a martyr of her or to let her live on, with all the uncertainties that could entail. But perhaps it is bourgeois of us to salute the Great Helmsman's widow simply for the vigor of her defense against what are patently political charges flowing from the ascension of a new leadership clique. For she is not merely a gutsy and, admittedly, disruptive woman trying to either go free or go into history. She is a political person struggling to revive her and her late husband's political cause. When you look at her show trial in this context, something other than her personal performance stands out. She is being. given a forum on China's official television for her counterattack. This could hardly happen if she did not have friends in high places still.

current leader, Deng Xiaoping, has failed in his effort to use the "Gang of Four" trial to discredit the Mao way of modernizing by perpetual revolution and to strengthen his own policy of modernizing by selected reform. But certainly Mr. Deng has fallen short. Tough decisions - some experts call them the most crucial since the Communist Party took power in 1949 — are on Peking's calendar this year. They involve the party's ideology, membership and governing policies. The unanswered question is whether Mr. Deng will be be attacking them after the trial or whether, in attacking the "Gang of

No Farewell to Arms

NEW YORK - "As one who has witnessed the horror and the lingering sadness of war - as one who knows that another war could utterly destroy this civilization which has been so slowly and painfully built up over thousands of years — I wish I could say to-night that a lasting peace is in sight.

"Happily, I can say that war has been avoided. Steady progress toward our ultimate goal has been made, But so much remains to be

With those words, just 20 years ago, Dwight D. Eisenhower said farewell to the American people. That last speech of his presidency has a poignant relevance today. For we live with the ultimate problems of international conflict and human survival that he identified, and we cannot speak of even limited "steady progress" in their solu-

That passage has the ring of something long ago and far away. Anyone using such language today would probably be dismissed by the ascendant hawks as "soft" or "blind to the Soviet threat," But it was a career military officer who made the statement, and there is every reason to think he would make it again today.

The need for strategic arms control - for limiting the armory of weapons that can destroy our civilization — is more argent today, not less. Indeed, the last 20 years have given us graphic examples of the futility and, worse, the danger of a ouclear arms race.

When Americans came up with the idea of MIRVs - multiple independently targeted nuclear warheads on a missile - we thought they would give us a strategic ad-vantage. So we declined to negoti-ate with the Russians a freeze oo

U.S. combat forces. That kind of program, Mr. Laird said, would increase U.S. ca-pability and send a clear signal to allies and "It is the type of ap-proach," he concluded, "used by our last two-term president, Dwight Eisenhower." The common denominator in both humiliations is the fact of a deadline. In the week before election, the deadline of Nov. 4 was working for the Iranians: They knew that their richest ransom would come if they could deliver an election victory along with the hostage

But the terrorists set their price ton high, and their moment of greatest leverage passed. Immedi-ately, another deadline was miroduced, which pressured the Iranians rather than the Americans: The onset of an administration prepared to retaliate against the Iranian act of war.

Barbarians'

To drive that point home, President-elect Reagan publicly brand-ed the Iranians "barbarians" and kidnappers." The purpose of the insult, which contrasted with the soft words put forward for months by the Carter negotiators, was to introduce a note of fear from our side. That was fair play, since the Iranian position was based on fear of what they would do to the Americans they held captive. The Americans then played

The Americans then played nice-gny, tough-guy in the oegotia-tion, the way cops try to induce a criminal to cooperate: I'm your buddy, have a cigarette, deal with me, because I can save you from that tough cop with a rubber hose in his hand in his hand.

At this writing, the deal seems to be working. The main reason we are getting our people back is that we have a deadline working for us, backed up by the threat of force. In addition to the threat of force there was the threat of inattention. The Reagan men hinted, that they were prepared to break off negotiations, declare our Foreign Service officers prisoners of war, and stop the handwringing. With the Iranian action downgraded, a deadline would then have been set for the return of the hostages. If no reasonable Iranian proposal had been made by that deadline, a series of punishments would have begun, culminating, if needed, in a military operation.

No Happy Ending But that would have cost lives - wasn't the Carter method, which seems to be ending happily, much to be preferred?

No. This is not a "happy" end-ing. The United States has paid a kidnapper nation ransom for the return of its citizens (we'll find out the full cost later) and set a precedent that encourages terrorists, and endangers innocents, everywhere.

Economic pressure; the threat of force; the setting of deadlines — that should have been U.S. policy from the start. This week, the Carter men are claiming that "in-ternational ostracism," the need

As far as the United States is concerned, this is one of those situations where the stakes --- conceivably the whole foreign-policy orientation of the People's Republic - are of surpassing importance. Yet for the United States to try to poke its nose in, however discreetly, would be intolerably risky. This is why it is disconcerting to see President-elect Reagan still maintaining a certain ambiguity about the "normalization" of relations that President Carter negotiated with China. Few charges could be more telling in an internal Chinese power struggle than the allegation that one side had yielded unwisely on Taiwan.

Deadlock on Namibia

In the long term, it is questionable whether the Namibia problem can be dealt with within the UN framework, or even ought to be. The key difficulty at the Geneva conference was the quession of UN impartiality. The Turnhalle Association (DIA) urges that present UN support for SWAPO would alone enable that organization to survive through a seven-month election campaign, and as long as the DIA insists on a change of UN practice before a cease-fire it will remain impossi-ble to implement UN Resolution 435. However, if the present deadlock results in secret direct contacts between South Africa and Angola, such as those that led to the Geneva conference, this might be beneficial in that it would eliminate much of the diplomatic deadwood that has helped to inhibit progress so far.

On the U.S. Hostages

Hiding behind the thin pretext that it was the act of students, the Iranian government organized a violent attack on the sovereign territory of a foreign embassy, took its diplomats and other staff prisoner, held them under abominable conditions, threatened to try and if necessary execute them in defiance, not merely of diplomatic convention, but of basic civilized behavior and used them as a means of blatant financial and political blackmail.

Where Iranians step with impunity, others will follow, and even more barbarously. A century ago such behavior would have courted swift and drastic punitive action by the civilized powers in concert, as Barbary pirates and Boxer rebels, among others, learned to their cost. Today the world looked

NEW YORK --- The course of the English elections, with results showing repeated successes of the Liberal Party, is being followed with great interest in the United States. The Wall Street Journal comments: "The most extrordianry feature of the elections is one that is showing itself all over the world. This is the success of the frankly trade-union element. The endorsement of Free Trade is wonderful." The Evening Post observes: "Joseph Chamberlain's plight is pitiful. Hard on 70 years, with a Liberal government before him good for four or five years, his dream of becoming prime minister on the Protection issue must now have vanished."

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. - With a roar that could be heard for miles around, thousands of tons of rock at the top of the Niagara Fails between the U.S. shore and Luna Island gave way last night and crashed hundreds of feet into the chasm formed by the rapids below. Minor caveins continued until 6 a.m. No one was injured. Thousands of persons here, including scores of honeymooners, rushed panic-strickedn from homes and hotels at the sound of the first cavein, many believing that some terrible disaster had occurred. The crash was plainly beard as far away as Buffalo. It is unknown what effect the cave-ins will have on hydroelectric development.

The Eisenhower farewell address is remembered for its warning against "unwarranted influence by the military-industrial complex." But its message was broader, touching on what ought to be acute concerns for Americans today — and for the Republi-can administration about to take office.

Something New

Eisenhower's point about the military-industrial complex was that it was something new in American history. Right through World War II the United States world war in the Omited States never had a large standing army or armaments industry. The Cold War gave us both; and Eisenhower said their influence — "economic, political, even spiritual" — was felt across the United States.

How much more true that has become in the last 20 years. The manufacturers of aircraft and missiles are now so important to regions and economic interests that Congress sometimes votes funds. for weapons systems not wanted by the Pantagon. There is a grow-ing tendency to look to weapons production and sales as a way out of national economic problems, al-though the analysts tell us that military spending cannot provide the employment and competitive industrial edge that we need. "Disarmament," Eisenhower said, "with mutual honor and confidence, is a continuing imperative. Together we must learn how to compose differences, not with arms, but with intellect and decent purpose. Because this need is so arp and apparent I confess that I lay down my official responsibili-tics in this field with a definite sense of disappointment."

- Temptation

That is exactly the temptation that seems so attractive to the oncoming administration despite the MIRV experience and others like it. President-elect Reagan said during the campaign that we ought to try an arms race as a way of making the Russians be reasonable about limiting nuclear weapons. From those around him come suggestions for enormous addi-tional spending on new ooclear weapons systems.

The talk is unwise because it distracts the United States from its real defense priority; to build up our conventional pability.

Instruments to Be Installed in Northern China

U.S., Peking Plan Joint Quake Research

By George Alexander

Los Angeles Times Service PASADENA, Calif. - U.S. and Chinese scientists have agreed to participate in a joint earthquake research program — with the Unitresearch program — with the Onit-ed States providing China with modern seismological instruments and the Chinese providing both the earthquakes and the recorded data from the instruments.

There is, of course, no guarantee that even one strong shock will oc-car in China during the 10 years that the instruments are expected to operate there. But, said Prof. Wilfred Iwan of the California Institute of Technology, one of the U.S. participants, the Peking-Tianjing region of northern China se-lected for the installation of the equipment has a long history of vigorous seismic activity.

Devastating Earthquake

The devastating Tangshan earthquake occurred in this 500-mile-long stretch in 1976, killing several bundred thousand people. Five other strong shocks, register-ing between 6.2 and 7.4 on the Richter scale, have hit different parts of the region since 1966. Over a roughly comparable area centers of shocks — something parts of the region since 1966. Over a roughly comparable area of Southern California during the same time, there have been only three earthquakes of magnitude 6 or greater: Parkfield, 1966; San mation about the ways energies are Fernando, 1971, and Imperial Valreleased in an earthquake and how those energies propagate through ley, 1979. We hope to obtain some excelthe carth. lent data in less time than if we were to install these instruments in California," Prof. Iwan said. "There is a higher level of seismicity there [in that part of China] and there's some ability to predict earthquakes."

The Chinese would be expected to concentrate the U.S. instruments in an area suspected of im-minent danger, he said, to yield a wealth of data about what actually happens just before, during and af-ter a powerful tremor. That information then might be applied to California earthquake faults and help U.S. scientists anticipate their rupturing.

The instruments are called strong-ground-motion devices because they are designed to measure

French Editors Troubled By Hachette Acquisition

By Herbert Mitgang New York Times Service

PARIS - The acquisition of controlling interest in Hachette, France's largest publishing and distribution company, by Matra, a large communications and industrial conglomerate that manufactures and exports arms and missiles systems, has disturbed some French editors and publishers.

There is fear of a loss of independence by Hachette's publishing subsidiaries when they come under the tight rein of a conglomerate that is basically a manufacturer of transportation and other heavy equipment, including military weapons. The possibility has also been raised that other independent publishing houses could be put under a competitive strain because of Hachette's control of major distribution outlets for books and magazines in France. A small independent publisher. Jean Grouet of Editions Rupture, expressed concern that Matra's main interests in other fields could result in editorial interference into the subject matter of Hachette's publications. Mr. Grouet said that the French government kept a close watch on what was published and that his own house had come under pressure because he had brought out books with political themes of a controversial nature,

Filippachi Involved

Herbert Lottman, biographer of Albert Camus and Paris-based cor-respondent for Publishers Weekly, the U.S. trade publication, noted the persistent claim heard in pub-liability of the table of the Man lishing circles that behind the Ma-tra takeover of Hachette was President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's attempt to control the press. In a news conference in mid-December, Jean-Luc Lagardere, president of Matra, denied any subservience to the government. One reason advanced for what is expected to he Matra's close control of Hachette publications is that the new ownership group is associated with Daniel Filipacchi, a magazine editor and publisher. He runs Paris-Match, puts out a French edition of Playboy and what has been described by publishers as similar magazines. Mr. Filipacchi, as chairman and majority owner, was involved in the attempt to revive Look magazine in the United States last year. Investors were reported to have lost $10 million in that unsuccessful effort.

The takeover of Hachette by Matra was accomplished on the open market, because no family or investment interests held dominating control. One of the major owners, a Paris bank, owned 5 percent. Hachette's shares were quietly ac-quired by Matra in small amounts last year until about 41 percent of the stock had been obtained. Before the principals became known, Le Monde called the takeover a scandal. Matra now holds about 83 percent of the stock. Hachette was founded in 1826 as a family enterprise. Today it includes more than 100 companies, led by its distribution operation;

Livre de Poche, the leading paper-back line in France; Grasset Stock, Fasquelle and other tradebook houses; the Walt Disney magazines; the newsweekly Le Point; the television guide Tele 7 Jours; and a part ownership of Mr. Filipacchi's Paris-Match.

Hachette also has links to U.S. Hachette also has links to U.S. publishers through the sales of rights and co-productions. An off-ice is maintained in New York, run by Paula Litzky, who scouts the U.S. publishing scene for potential books and provides information to U.S. publishers for dealing with the Paris-based company. Ha-chette comes the Repeats Publishchette owns the Regents Publishing Company in New York, a prof-itable educational house. It also participates in co-publishing ven-tures with the Vendome Press, whose publisher, Alexis Gregory, brings out large picture and art books on such subjects as "The Great Houses of Paris" and "Romantic Painting." Commenting on the acquisition, Miss Litzky said that Matra's holdings in communications could lead to a possible expansion of Ha-chette's interests in the audiovisual field. Mr. Gregory said be believed that Vendome would continue its program without change, and add-ed that he did not expect to publish any picture books on military arms in the foresecable future.

France's ruling center-right coali-tion has received a boost with Gaullist candidate Jacques Taillear easily defeating his Communist opponent in a parliamentary by-election.

It was the last scheduled by-election before the two-round presi-dential election in April and May. and it showed clearly that the coa-lition parties are more united than their Communist and Socialist op-position, Mr. Tailleur received 52 percent of the vote in the runoff on Sunday, against 47 percent for Communist candidate Marcel Larmanou.

'To Bird - With Love,' A Book and a Friendship

By Michael Zwerin mal Herald Tribune

DARIS - Francis Paudras mortgaged his bouse, raising $135,000 to produce a lush, fat tabletop book with 424 photos docu-menting the life of Charlic (Bird) Parker, and then threw a $5,000 champagne party to launch it.

Paudras is too good to be true. There are those who call him some sort of super-groupie, or accuse him of riding on the back of jazz to make a name for himself. But be is oot rich, he has risked a lot, and if money is any check on reality be is real. It is refreshing to hear: "I could have done this cheaper, but in jazz everything is always cheap. I wanted a first-class book and a first-class party."

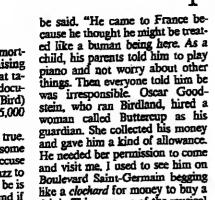

The book was done in conjunction with Chan Parker, Bird's widow, who lives in a Paris suburb. Paudras was appalled when he saw how her photo album was withered and fading. The first thing he did after meeting her was have nega-tives made of everything. Then be took a trip to Kansas City, where Parker was born, to dig up photos of his childhood, of his musical manuscripts, his friends and acquaintances, his children, his correspondence, his peers, contracts for grotesque sums -- like $79.54 for a recording date now consid-ered "historic." There is a reproduction of Parker's painting of his daughter Pree, who died at the age of 2½, imagining her grown up. The result is "To Bird With Love" (Societe Wizlov, La Cure, 86310 Antigny, France). Priced at $125, it is aimed at people for whom the name Al Haig denotes Charlie Parker's pianist rather than a secretary of state. For an in crowd, it is a valuable historical document. That it was produced in Paris is an illustration of how jazz has always been treated more seriously and with more love in Europe than in its home country.

"Conspiracy of Silence"

Paudras, who supports himself with his graphic design business, is a sort of Don Quixote, always fighting windmills. There is what he calls a "conspiracy of silence" about jazz, as there was for years about the blues, because it is made by what writer Ralpb Ellison called "The Invisible Man." If the Parker book makes any money, Pandras would like to follow it with one on the pianist Bud Powell, who was a drunk and in terrible shape when Paudras invited him to live in his home.

"In a sense I was Bud's lover,"

'You'll have to ask Buttercup.' She said OK as long as she went on collecting the money. For about seven months be hardly spoke except to ask for something. A psy-chiatrist friend of mine said Bud was a classic example of schizo-phrenia. We would eat in complete silence, or be would be in his room.

Then one day I exploded. I said, 'Bud you've got to under-stand we love you, but we can't help you because you won't say anything. You have to talk, to communicate.' I must have moved him because he took my hand and my wife's hand and he looked at us and said. Do you love me, really? We said, 'Of course Bud.' He stopped drinking for six months after that.

"One night we went to bear Ray Charles. Backstage, Bud said, 'Hey, Ray. it's Bud Powell.' They shook hands. Then Bud said, 'Ray, you're blind.' He went right to the heart of the matter, like a child. Ray didn't know how to handle it. He said: 'Uh, nah nah nah.' Right away Bud's face changed. He just mumbled, 'You look like it.'

"He was house pianist at the Blue Note Club then. The club had been more or less created for him. One day I told the owner, Ben Benjamin, to pay Bud directly. I was trying to rebuild a man, trying to make him take his life into his own hands. Everybody found it normal that Buttercup took his money. So they paid him directly for the first time and called a taxi after the gig. Before they had paid the driver in front, now be was going to pay himself. The club called to tell me be had gone. I waited five minutes, very nervous,

"He was so happy to have his own money. He went out and bought us steak and then kept asking if it was good, as if he was the host. We didn't have very much money then and it was unusual for us to eat steak. He said, 'You think I'm stupid, you think I can't see you need money? Then he started to cry, everybody was crying in the house. "One night our psychiatrist friend who had called Bud schizophrenic came to have dinner with her busband and daughter. Her daughter was studying piano. She didn't want to play but Bud con-vinced her. He said everybody is afraid. He encouraged her and then they played four bands to-gether. Before my psychiatrist friend left, she said to me: 'I don't like thinking I could be so wrong. I've never seen anybody less crazy than Bud Powell." "Bud had tuberculosis and he

Opera in Rome

A Revival of 'Fanciull

By William Weaver ational Herald Tribune

R tion of the season at the Rome Opera is a revival, currently then as now, serving as tokens of love and admiration. A charming posy holder, perhaps the only French one from this period and a gift from Charles IX to Archduke playing, of Puccini's "La Fanciulla del West," a work absent from the Ferdinand II of Anstria, is gold house for almost seven years. with multicolored enameling and

"ossis"

The old production was a solid, realistic presentation, which fol-lowed fairly obediently the elaborate directions established by the composer on the basis of David Belasco's original play, which Puc-cini much admired. Now the wellknown Italian sculptor Mario Ceroli has designed an anti-conventional series of sets which may be, in themselves, attractive; but they work actively against the drama, creating confusion and -- in the end -- initiation. The Polka saloon resembles a Joseph Cornell -box: Min in a house made of bales of straw, and the cathedral-like forest of the finale is turned into an anonymous space with some cutout plywood horses. The costumes are traditional, but not interesting. Mauro Bol-ognini's staging is perfunctory. But what matters about "La Fancialla del West" is the glorious score and its rich, kaleidoscopic orchestration, and Daniel Oren, who has brought the Rome Opera orchestra back to life, makes every page of the music glitter and glow. There is electricity in his reading, and there is unabashed enjoyment. The great climaxes swell and break like giant waves. His excitement is communicated not only to the orchestra, but also to the chorus (male division), particularly important -- and successful -- in the fast-moving episodes of Act I. Here the strong casting of the smaller parts also strengthens the performance (Manlio Rocchi is an specially good Nick). In the title role, Olivia Stapp moves and sings confidently. If she

Tuning In on Cable Television

By Merrill Brown Washington Past Service

WASHINGTON - There is the Portuguese channel in Massachusetts, the Jewish shows in California, a variety of educational, cultural and film networks, 24-hour news and sports octworks, and there are shows in New York with hosts evaluating the latest available strains of manjuana and asking women to disrobe on the city's streets.

And that's just a small sampling. With the promise and development of U.S. cubic televi-sion systems offering dozens of channels, old and new television programmers are looking for things -- some say anything — to put on the air. New players in the cable game are entering the market left and right. Combine the availability of outlets with the ability to offer shows without commercials and without consorship, and it is easy to see why those who want to market products and services see cable television as an opportunity conpareil. As an advertising medium and, through "two-way" cable systems, as a direct sales and service mecha-nism, cable television has enormous business potential. Some subscribers are part of experiments enabling them to bank and shop via the cable.

In addition, local governments, politicians and civic activists of various persuasions see cable television as a means of distributing to the citizenry a plethora of viewpoints, neighborhood news, municipal meetings, edu-cational shows and other services that could ultimately have a dramatic effect oo the nation's economic and intellectual marketplace.

Yet, despite the frantic efforts of broadcasting giants like ABC and CBS to garner a share of the cable programming market, the development of other services to the home, such as banking and news, are also key segments of the future of cable relevision.

In Columbus, Ohio, which has emerged as the nation's cable television laboratory because of the Warner Amex QUBE network, a sampling of subscribers later this year will be hooked into CompuServe data banks enabling them to gather news from The Washington Post and The New York Times, stocks, video games, airline and bus information and a variety of services. CompuServe is a subsidiary of H&R Block Inc. Using a control box supplied by Atari, another Warner property, between the hours of 6 p.m. and 5 a.m., sub-scribers will have access to this data and will be able for $5 an hour to pull out millions of pieces of information onto their television screens.

But the application of these computer technologies raises significant questions for an industry that had until re-cently simply regarded its service as that of a transmission

Like futures contracts, options can be used by businesses to en-sure a constant price for the goods they plan to use in the future, and are favored by speculators for their substantial leverage. But the cost for an option is a single relatively small fee, known as the premium, paid at the front end, rather than the unforesceable margin calls on futures contracts.

SEC Jurisdiction

Stock options have boomed in the seven years they have been traded on exchanges, with 96.7 million contracts traded last year. But efforts to create exchange traded commodity options stalled in 1979 when members of the Commodity Putnes Trading Commission failed to agree on rules for trading. There had been efforts to put commodity options on ex-changes after scandals in over-thecounter commodity options led the commission to ban their sales by all but a few dealers.

Now investment industry executives have new hope that commodity options are about to take off. For one thing, the completion of the commission is expected to change when the Reagan adminis-

break the impasse that has blocked approval of options trading. Meanwhile, the Securities and Exchange Commission has asserted its own jurisdiction over what it calls options on financial instru-ments. The SEC seems to be moving actively toward approving a proposal by the Chicago Board Options Exchange to trade options on mortgage securities guaran by the government (Government National Mortgage Associa certificates, known as Gi Maes). extraordi creases in edit expaned financial e does not ework for his thesis, but gives a history of the various credit crunches since World War II and the financial system's responses to them.

He says this history shows that "credit crunches caused by regula-tory constraints on the linancial markets have played a constructive role in precipitating cyclical down-turns ahead of more scrious endogenous bankruptcy crises ... and before the high inflation rates characteristic of business cycles could become deeply embedded." He believes, moreover, that the ling the monetary aggregates, in particular the narrow M1 measure of the money supply, has been a shift toward ease and encouragement of higher inflation and interest rates.

The links between any credit factor that the authorities are trying to control and economic aggregates such as the growth of nominal GNP tend to break down once the Fed tries to control the aggregate, Mr. Wojnilower says. This idea has been propagated by Charles Goodhart, an official of the Bank of England, and has be-come known as "Goodhart's law." Mr. Wojnilower restates it suc cinctly when he says that "any variable the central bank chooses to control automatically becomes irrelevant" as the ingenious financial markets work out a way of circunventing it.

He does not argue for a return to the old type of controls, but sug-gests that the Fed should control credit by measures including "punitive margin requirements" on transactions in the speculative futures markets, marginal capital re-quirements on banks and the outlawing of floating-rate credit contracts

Domestic Oil Tax

In another Brookings paper, economist William Nordhaus suggests that industrialized countries, including the United States. should impose an oil tax of be-tween $62 and $100 a barrel by 1990 to optimize the future pattern of oil demand and price rises. He price changes.

The only way to minimize the price ratcheting by OPEC is thus for industrialized oil consumers to economize on their use of oil, Mr. Nordhans says. This can be done either by slowing growth or by raising prices through domestic taxation on oil.

Their accusations stem from an investigation into the company's business practices that was begun in 1974. Though the inquiry was instigated by complaints from var-ious Enropean and American computer companies, the force behind it evidently came from the Europe-an subsidiaries of U.S. computer manufacturers that produce equip-ment that is compatible with IBM machines — such as Amdabl, Memorex and Itel, the defunc computer leasing company whose operations are now ran by National Advanced Systems, a subsidary of National Semiconductor. of National S

Many observers of Europe's computer market expect a long legal boat, and they are skeptical that it will have significant effects on IBM's entrenched business. From today you'll find an ABN office in Colombo, Sri Lanka.

For more than 150 years, ABN has been active in the international banking world.

Today, ABN's position of prominence in international banking is reaffirmed once again through the inauguration of an ABN office in Colombo.

This makes ABN one of the first international banks - and the first Dutch bank - to establish an office in Sri Lanka

The colourful and bustling capital is developing into a crossroads for all major shipping lines in the region. To the north of the city, near the international airport, a Free-Trade zone has been developed that offers favourable conditions to foreign investors. The infra-structure of this country is also being rapidly updated to meet the demands of the twenty-first century.

It goes without saying, that the establishment of an international bank like ABN will have a positive effect on this process. Because through its extensive experience in the Far East, ABN is particularly well-qualified to advise the local business community about import/export financing.

Furthermore, ABN offers a perfect entrée to international loans and issues, and so can provide for possibilities of massive fundraising. And of course a host of corporate banking services can adequately be handled by our skilled local staff, who are backed up by the know-how and experience of ABN office an ideal starting point for businessmen.

Should you want more information about opportunities in Sri Lanka, contact your nearest ABN Bank or phone the Amsterdam International Directorate (020)-293237.

On request we can also provide you with our detailed country report "Sri Lanka", picturing the main aspects of the present-day Sri Lanka economy, investment climate, foreign trade and exchange control regulations.

SWANSON ON SWANSON By Gloria Swanson, Random House, 535 pp. $15.95. Reviewed by Barbara Goldsmith

GLORIA SWANSON - star. At the height of her career she was perhaps the most famous female in the world. This self-described "little shrimp with a turned-up nose and house teeth and a mole on her chin" was both celluloid and flesh. In darkened movie palaces Gloria Swanson lived out the fantasies of an adoring public. In scores of films made before her eclipse in the late 1930s, Swanson created conflicting imag-es of sophisticated sexuality and simple domesticity, of magnificent display and humble self-sacrifice, of wild adventure and helpless feminity. Paradoxically, it becomes apparent that Swanson, while consistently reflecting the aspirations and ambivalences of the United States, adopted them as her own. She has lived a life caught up in the opposing illusions she created OIL SCIECTL

The Swanson of this antobiogra-phy emerges as a ferociously driven career woman who vows that all she wants in life are babies (this said directly following an abor-tion) and quiet domesticity on a farm (this said at the height of her flamboyant extramarital affair with Joseph Kennedy). She is a camy, ambitious business person who allows several of her husbands and lovers to take over her life and her pocketbook, calls them "Dad-dy" (her third husband being French is exempt, he is addressed as "Papa"), and subsequently be-littles them until in example after example of self-fulfiling prophecy, she ends up paying both literally and figuratively. Gloria Swanson's life unfolds in a series of scenes that could have been lifted from her films. Gloria May Josephine Swanson, born March 27, 1899, "Inder the sign of Aries," is the only daughter of a mother determined to make her "unique" and a career officer father. As they move from post to post, Mother stitches up a spectac-ular wardrobe while Daddy tells Gloria the names of all the stars and even fights his way through a herricane to her side. She idolizes hurricane to her side. She idolizes him, and it is years later that she discovers his faults. Her idealized image of Daddy and her search for paternal domination is to color all her relationships with men.

Gloria quits school after ninth grade to become a stock extra at the Essanay Company in Chicago at a weekly salary of $13.25. In 1915, Mother leaves Daddy and takes Gloria to California where Mack Scanett puts her to work as a cute, perky connectienne, Within two years her weekly salary is $100. When her mother remarries, 17-year-old Gloria, feeling adnift and alone, elopes with Wallace Beery. Her vision of him is romantic, but her wedding night (depicted in graphic horror) destroys all illusions of romance. They are married only two months, but in that time she discovers Beery's inadequacies: he drinks, philanders, and when Gloria finds herself pregnant, Beery slips her some "medicine" that causes her to abort the child she wanted. She leaves him and the slapstick Mack months). In Paris to film dame Sans-Gene" she hire aristocratic penniless Henri, quis de la Falaise de la Cou as her interpreter. Within the Swanson has added a prest symbol more prized than monds or a sable coat to be lection of luxuries: She be the Marquise de la Falsise Coudraye. "I was the first ce in pictures to be manying a Huropean. All over the worl were rejoicing because Cin-had married the prince."

With a sense of melo Swanson chooses to begin 1 tobiography with this, her wedding. Twenty-four hour she has an abortion to prese career. She instinctively stands that the public, who c age her sexual escapades, punish her if they discover their fantasies were true. Th tion is botched, and Gioria dies from blood poisonin vows she will leave the file live a life of domestic bli Henri. Lost Driver Finds 'Bumpy Road,' Gets Unexpected Push From Train

The Associated Press CENTRAL ISLIP, N.Y. — Ricardo Roldan got lost driving home and thought the snow-covered railroad tracks he wound up on were a "bumpy road."

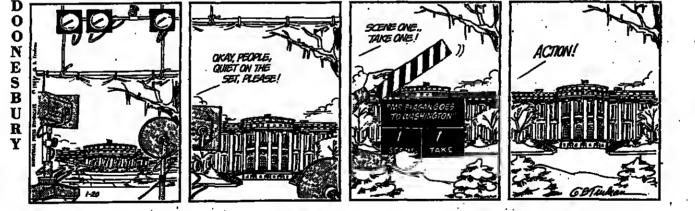

He says he "got nervous" when he looked in his rearview mirror and saw a train bearing down on his car. The train hit the rear of Mr. Roldan's car and pushed it a quarter of a mile, demolishing it.

Mr. Roldan was taken to Smithtown General Hospital, where he was listed in good condition with cuts and bruises and possible head injuries.

Police said Mr. Roldan was driving from a relative's house in Central Islip to his home in Brentwood on Friday night when he apparently got lost. He turned from Veteran's Memorial Highway onto a maintenance path, winding up on the snow-covered Long Island Rail Road tracks.

De Mille films on "the marital inbe while high society people" proj-ects her to stardom. Draped in a king's ransom of jewels, furs and fabulous fashions, Swanson be-comes the quintessence of luxury and style. Her sexual image is that of the ultimate femme fatale. Her weekly salary is $7,000. Soon she will have her own production com-pany and her yearly salary will be $1 million.

Although Gloria Swanson is now 81 years old, her life through her mid-20s occupies more than three-quarters of this antobiography. At her zenith she led a vivid, chaotic existence that moved at the hyped-up pace of a Scanctt chase. Her personality was reactive, a litmus paper gauge of the current social values and the desires of her public. "We dealt every minute in our pictures with love and marriage. I wasn't surprised that people thought of us as creatures who do nothing but fall in love, on the screen as well as off, and in fact, they seem to discourage us from doing anything else."

Swanson herself scems always in love. There is the $30 million heir to the Crane bathroom fixture em-pire, Craney Gartz, who won't marry her, and the film executive, Herbert Somborn, who does. "Daddy" Somborn doesn't turn out to be the acute businessman she had hoped for, but she has the she had hoped for, but she has the baby she wants and names her lit-tle Gloria. Then she promptly falls in love with film director Marshall (Mickey) Neilan, adopts another child, Joseph, divorces Somborn and falls madly in love with film star Rod La Rocque (for two

No Love for Owner

For the moment, the bittemess and anger of the Raiders' threatened move to Los Angeles was forgotten in the bliss of reaching the Super Bowl. It was almost a schizbrenie reaction: The fans loved the Raiders. The team was theirs, even if Raider owner Al Davis was hated carpetbagger who wanted Explaining the devotion of Raider fans is not difficult. Oakland and the Raiders have a bond that goes beyond pride.

Ever since gold rush pioneer Moses Chase pitched the first squatters tent in the mud of the rancho of Spanish grandee Don Luis Maria Peralta and gazed across the fog-draped bay at the booming settlement of Yerba Buena, Oaklanders have had an inferiority complex about San Francis-CO.

Now we learn that authorities are looking into the possibility that two or more Boston College basketball players took bribes in the 1978-79 season to shave points for the benefit of gamblers betting that Boston College would not beat the boukmakers' point sprcad.

It goes without saying that when hanky-panky is revealed or merely suspected in any sport, the un-derworld is assumed to he at the bottom of it. We are told that these are symptoms of a sickness besetting the age we live in, an age of declining moral and ethical standards in which couples live together ontside of wedlock, corporations do business by bribing national leaders and politicians lie to everybody. The fact is, it is all as new as mortal sin.

When men crawled out of caves and set to bludgeoning each other for a toothsome blonde or a haunch of dinosaur, kibitzers started questioning the sincerity of the combatants. It is amusing to read, as we do every little while, that a Tony Ciulla's testimony about fixing races or a Jake LaMotta's adsion that he went in the water for Billy Fox has given a black eye to racing or boxing and shaken public faith in the game's integrity.

How U.S. Overthrows President Peacefully

WASHINGTON - It is very perplexing for foreigners to understand how the United States was going to overthrow his govern-ment, why didn't he declare mar-tial law and round up all the peochanges presidents. I happened to be with a military attache from a South American country over the weekend who is going to cover his first inaugural.

He was quite bewildered about how it was to be done. "What will President Carter be doing up there on the platform?" he wanted to know. "He'll be watching the new president of the 22 United States Buchwald being sworn in." "Isu't Carter under house arrest? "No, we don't put our presi-dents under house arrest," I told him. "It's much more cruel to make them see their successor take over the office."

"Will there be any colonels up ou the platform?" "Why should there be colonels on the platform?" "We always give the colouels who overthrow our government the best seats."

"Our colonels didn't overthrow the government. The president was elected by the people."

"But didn't you have the junta oversec the elections?"

"We had no junta. People just went to the polls and voted for the candidate they wanted."

"How can you do that under martial law?" "We didn't have martial law," I said, patiently,

"But if Carter knew that Reagan

"Besides, being president of the United States for four years can seem like a lifetime."

"When do the trials of Carter's Cabinet officers begin?" "There are not going to be any trials, Most of them will go back to their law practices or head up large corporations." How can Reagan be sure they won't work clandestinely to overthrow him?" "They will, but not until 1984." "Will there be any tanks up

The 'Elephant Man' Takes on 'Macbeth'

By Michiko Kakutani New York Times Service

NEW YORK - As John Merrick, that sadly deformed freak in "The Elephant Man," Philip Anglim portrayed a character of radical innocence, a creature of physical monstrosity and inner beanty. The play was a critical as well as a popular triumph, and it established the hitherto unknown Anglim as one of the theater's most impressive young actors. His latest project represents a considerable departure from that role: Since last month he has been rehearsing the enormously demanding part of that most guilt-ridden of kings in that bloodiest of Shakespeare's major tragedies, "Macbeth, " which opens Thursday for a nine-week run.

At 27, Anglim is, of course, remarkably young to be playing the infamous Soottish king. Laurence Olivier, for instance, was 48 when he performed it in 1955. Maurice Evans was 40 in his acclaimed production in 1941; and Michael Redgrave 39 in 1947. Macbeth, after all, is a man of large and he-roic proportions who, unlike other Shake-harrowing because he is so much closer to us --- he is a good man who does one bad deed and gets caught up in spearean heroes, does not achieve a tragic ac-ceptance of fate, but undergoes a kind of psychological disintegration. It is a role requiring a maturity of vision as well as great technical facility, and some scholars actually contend that it is the most difficult of all it and it makes him numb."

Shakespearean parts to perform. To further complicate matters, this pro-duction of "Macbeth" represents a gamble for all parties involved. It is not only Anglim's debut in a Shakespearean role in New York — so far he has played Mercutio, Benedick, Prince Hal and Bassanio in regional productions - but also the first play over staged by Sarah Caldwell, the renowned op-era director. Coming after "The Philadelphia Story," which opened to mixed reviews in the fail, "Macbeth" is also the fledgling Lincoln Center Theater Company's first classical un-dertaking. According to the executive direc-tor of the theater, Richmond Crinkley, it was selected because the company wanted to try a Shakespearean tragedy. Since productions of "Hamlet" and "King Lear" had already been mounted at the Vivian Beaumont and "Othello" was recently staged in the park, "Macbeth" seemed the logical choice.

Anglim, on his part, seems well aware of the magnitude of the challenge, although he points out that his youth helps give this pro-duction its particular tone and focus. It illuminates the element of patricide in Macbeth's murder of Duncan, makes the rela-tionship between Macbeth and Lady Mac-beth more intensely sexual, and it reinforces the portrait of the Thane as a callow, essentially good man who is also capable of evil. Besides, Anglim adds, "An actor mustn't wait and say, "When I'm 50 I'll he ready to play Macbeth' Yes, at 50, you'll probably be a better Macbeth than you'll be at 27, but you must cherish your opportunities."

Time for a Change

Indeed, the shape and arc of his own ca-reer have made Anglim acutely aware of just how fortuitons things in the theater can be. After 575 performances in "The Elephant Man" on Broadway and on tour, his name became virtually synonymous with the part. Carefully analytic when it comes to his voca-tion, he has decided that he must now "demonstrate a range and build a body of work." "It would be hard to think of a part as different from the Elephant Man as Mac-beth," he said, "But I felt it was time to divest myself of the Elephant Man. There's more pressure involved for me than for someone who's older and had this same success - when things happen quickly, the pres-sure to prove yourself is greater. There's very little room for error in this situation, but you can't let that pressure incapacitate you. I felt very strongly about taking this part." Although the visceral, nightmare imagery of "Macbeth" will no doubt lend itself to her well-known penchant for brilliant visual py-rotechnics, Miss Caldwell too says she has a very healthy respect for the enormity of what we're trying to do." Given her musical background, the director tends to feel that the pacing, "the momentum of the play is the most important thing." But she and the cast are working line by line with the text, occasionally stopping for as long as an hour to discuss the meaning of a single word.

Psychological Range

"Macbeth possesses this enormous psycho logical range," says Anglim. "There's the sol-dier and the poet, the bad man and the good man, the ambitious man and the cautious man. You have to find these elements in this cauldron of an individual and choose the ones you want to bring forward. You bring Sarah a number of things and she'll tell you from out front what's working the best. She's a wonderful editor."

How will Anglim be able to meet the strennous demands of "Macbeth"? Because Miss Caldwell's staging calls for lots of chases and swordplay along the battlements, the actor is running three miles a day and spending two hours an afternoon with a "fight consultant." He has been studying the language and the subtext of the play since he first accepted the part last April, formulating an approach to this most challenging of roles even while ap-pearing in other shows.

"When I first read 'Macbeth' years ago I somehow thought the tragedy was slighter than 'Lear' or 'Hamlet,'" he says. "But I re-ahzed that Macbeth is all the more harrowing because he is so much closer to us - he is a good man who does one bad deed and gets a good main with such and it makes him numb. He has problems with his conscience because his world is too symbolic for him: He sees mean-ing in everything: for everyone else in the play, life doesn't have that complexity."

Actress Mae West, who died Nov. 22 at the age of 87, left her S1-million estate to friends, relatives and charities, but nothing to her bodyguard and companion of 26 years. The 12-page will, dated Nov. 9, 1964, and filed for probate in Santa Monica, Calif, did not mention Paul Novak. The Mae West Fan Club of Ontario, Canada however, is to receive $3,500. The will left $25,000 and her car. jewelry and other personal effects to Miss West's sister, Mildred West of Sepulveda, Calif.; $15,000 to a nephew, John West; $19,000 to her private secretary, and other small bequests to friends. The remainder of the estate is to be put in trust with Mildred West the sole beneficiary until her death. Upon the death of Mildred, the trust is to
